PLANS for the specialty show of the Bulldog Club of America are progressing with leaps and bounds. Already the premium list numbers more than 100 special prizes and trophies as well as many cash prizes; and from the interest already being displayed by the fancy, a large entry is anticipated. The show will take place in conjunction with the all-breed fixture of the North Westchester Kennel Club on the lovely grounds in North Westchester, where it was held prior to the war. Considerable approval has been expressed in the selection of our judge, who is an extremely well known breeder and one of the Middle West's most respected authorities. This will be his first judging assignment in the East.

Reports from our member club, the Washington Bulldog Club, indicate that it enjoyed a very successful specialty show on Mar. 31. Judge James W. Geddes found his best in show in Dr. J. H. Elvin's well put together Ch. Elvinar's Falstone Torpedo, and best opposite in Ch. Sunbarry Silent Suzy, which belongs to Everett C. Bennett. Winners' dog was the young but well-known winner, Hobbyhome Cintorson, belonging to Robert S. Horne. Winners bitch went to S.P. Averill's fine young bitch, Averill's Belinda. There were a total of 82 entries with 25 males and 32 bitches benched. Six champions competed for best in show honors and the parade of champions. We congratulate the members of the Washington Bulldog Club on this fine achievement.
